The Messenger of Allah (may Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him) died with his head resting between my chest and my neck. When his soul departed (his body), it smelled like the best scent I have ever smelled

‘Ā'ishah (may Allah be pleased with her) reported: The Messenger of Allah (may Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him) died with his head resting between my chest and my neck. When his soul departed (his body), it smelled like the best scent I have ever smelled.

[Authentic hadith] [Narrated by Ahmad]

‘Ā'ishah (may Allah be pleased with her) tells that the Prophet (may Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him) died while leaning against her chest, and that when his soul departed his body, it smelled like the best scent she has ever smelled.
