When the Messenger of Allah (ﷺ) said: ''Sami‘allāhu liman hamidah (Allah hears whoever praises him),'' none of us would bend his back until the Prophet (ﷺ) had fallen in prostration. We would then fall in prostration right after him

‘Abdullah ibn Yazīd al-Khatmi reported: Al-Barā’—and he is not a liar—said to me: When the Messenger of Allah (ﷺ) said: ''Sami‘allāhu liman hamidah (Allah hears whoever praises him),'' none of us would bend his back until the Prophet (ﷺ) had fallen in prostration. We would then fall in prostration right after him.

[Authentic] [Agreed upon]

Al-Barā’ ibn ‘Āzib (may Allah be pleased with him) truthfully reported that when the Prophet (ﷺ) raised his head from bowing and said: Sami‘allāhu liman hamidah (Allah hears whoever praises Him), those behind him would remain standing, and none of them would bend his back to prostrate until the Prophet (ﷺ) had placed his forehead on the ground—then they would all prostrate after him.
